Basic Food Handlers Training

Food hygiene information workshop
for all food handlers

Food Handlers Training

The National Food Safety Standards require businesses to "ensure their staff and supervisors have the skills and knowledge in food safety commensurate with their work activities".

In many organisations, charities, schools, or food serving premises, a lack of time, money or access makes it difficult for food handlers to attend food hygiene training courses.

Using the FoodSafe[®] Training Package, We offer an inexpensive in-house training program that brings basic food hygiene information directly to food handlers.

Disclosure: This Flyer is not a binding contractual document. It is intended for informative purpose only and may be subject to change at anytime at the discretion at Edmund Rice Camps.

By booking your training with us, you are helping us to continue offering our services & enriching lives of children, young people and families.

The training is designed to entertain and get people thinking and talking about food safety using humour to demonstrate the 'wrong' and then 'right' way of working.

The workbook helps to reinforce the DVD messages.

An answer sheet allows food handlers to assess their understanding of food hygiene.

This training is usually delivered in a 1-2 hour workshop which can be undertaken at your workplace or ours!

Certificates of Attendance will be issued to all participants!
